OLD HUTCH IN A NEW ROLE

Doesn't Know About Fans, but There'll Be Lots of Fools Around.

Benjamin J. Hutchinson, familiarly known as "Old Hutch," the ex-millionaire ruler of the grain market, was this morning sitting up his restaurant at 51 First street, where the principal dishes, according to rumor, will be pork, in deference to Chicago, the scene of his whilom operations, and beans, as a souvenir of the cereals on which he risked and lost so many millions.

As a matter of personal taste, however, he has no objection to eating anything but the sakes of which, indeed, he is said to have decided to become a Monfrase, as his demands for this toothsome pastry was sometimes supplied with sufficient alacrity at the request of his guests.

"Old Hutch" was as uncommunicative as ever, although he had promised to give today as well as last week, a series of lectures on the subject of the new business programme. He was asked by an Evening reporter:

When do you think of opening your new venture?

"How do you know it's to be a restaurant? It may be a furniture store. I can't tell what the future will bring forth. Can you?"

"What is your present intention about it?"

"My present intention is to fire you off and go. If you keep on bothering me with "You will have a breezy place for a restaurant," ventured the reporter. "Running through from Pearl to Bridge streets, the wind will always be enough air. I don't suppose a jerky, excited way, every now and then emphasizing his periods with a jerk of a paint-brush at the reporter's nose. He was dressed in full broadcloth and sported an immaculate white collar and big black tie, with together with his Quaker hat, made him look like a deacon in his Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes. He looked rugged and picturesque in the extreme as he laid the paint upon the about a half of the paraphernalia which "O. Hutch" had got together to fit up his place. Mr. Craft afterwards said: "I got the thing for less than they would have cost me elsewhere."

"So you may possibly go into the furniture business after all?"

When THE EVENING WORLD artist afterwards asked "Old Hutch" for permission to draw him the latter gave a snort of rage, and swinging the paint brush around the artist's head, shouted:

"Get out of here or I'll have your confounded impudent face 'in oil' before you know it."

The Mercury Climbing Up Toward

90 and Humidity in It, Too.

The mercury's vaulting record of 91.6 degrees, made in 1888, promises, according to Southern Education Bureau, to be equalled.

At 8 o'clock this morning the temperature was 75 and humidity 80 per cent., with heavy blizzard at the rate of twenty-

At 12.30 the thermometer at Perry's pharmacy indicated 84 degrees, but the heat w tempered by a stiff breeze and rendered less oppressive. The mercury had climbed from 79 to 84 in two and one half hours, and the upward tendency was not lessened as the time grew apace.

The heat was severely felt particularly the east-side tenement districts of New York, where several cases of collapse were reported; in the downtown resorts where cooling beverages are dispensed the patrol
